2016 DC Election Candidate Questionnaire

Washington National and Dulles airports are an important source of employment for people in our communities. But instead of helping our communities move ahead, the low wages and poor conditions for food and retail workers at these airports are keeping workers behind. At Dulles, the estimated average wage for retail and food service workers is just $9.74 per hour yet for every hour worked by a concessions employee at the airport, the government makes an estimated $14. Major airports across the country have taken great strides in giving retail and food service workers a better deal by working with UNITE HERE. We believe that airport concessions workers in our nation's capital deserve the same. D.C. appoints several members to the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority which governs these airports.

1)		What would you do to ensure that National and Dulles airport food and retail workers are paid fair wages and benefits?
		[Answer A]
		I would support the mayor signing a labor peace agreement with UNITE HERE and the other labor organizations that represent or seek to represent workers at the regional airports. In additional, I would urge the District's board members to support this Labor Peace Agreement. Once this Peace Agreement is signed, as labor contracts are renewed, we will press the board to have wages consistent with the District of Columbia and push for the $15/hr. by 2020.

studies have shown that good patient outcomes and short hospital stays require adequate numbers of registered professional nurses at the bedside. When there are fewer RN's to care for more and increasingly ill patients, complications multiply and expensive hospital stays are increased.

2)		I do support most of the content in the act. I also believe that all medical professionals should have a safe and healthy work environment. I think further discussions are needed surrounding all healthcare workers and not just BSNs/RNs. We also need to examine how it affects overall healthcare costs.

More and more companies are springing up offering visitors to the City options other than registered businesses such as hotels and bed and breakfast inns, such as stays in people's homes and apartments in residential neighborhoods. This causes noise, parking problems, and loss of tax revenue.

3)		Do you support stronger enforcement of our zoning laws, which are designed to protect our neighborhoods and affordable housing from the unchecked growth of short-term rentals? Yes kinds of festivals, concerts, promotions occur on city property or on property controlled by the City and some of these vendors exploit the workforce used to operate these events, paying lowest wages tolerated, providing no healthcare, offering no job training to enhance the skill set, and treating these workers as "1099 independent contractors", thereby avoiding Social Security and payroll taxes. This situation also disadvantages the "brick and mortar" permanent facilities providing arts and entertainment in our city.

4)		Would you be willing to support DC legislation that would require any and all presenters, promoters, vendors, "Events DC", et al doing any form of for-profit theatrical presentation, show or concert on City property or on property controlled by the City to pay all of their employees an area-standard wage, provide health care coverage and access to job training in the Technical Entertainment Industry? The Davis-Bacon Act of 1931 requires the payment of local prevailing wages for the construction of DC government public works projects, such as public schools, fire and police stations, and roads and bridges. Relying on a narrow definition of public works that is currently the subject of a court challenge, the District requires some government-assisted development projects to pay construction workers the local Davis Bacon wages, but not others. For example, development projects receiving Tax Increment Financing from the District are required to pay their construction workers local prevailing wages, but projects receiving property and other types of tax abatements, using the District's industrial revenue bond program, or leasing or purchasing District-owned land are not required to pay local prevailing wages.

5)		As a DC Councilmember, will you introduce and support legislation to require the payment of Davis Bacon wages by construction contractors and subcontractors working on ALL projects receiving property and other tax abatements, involving the sale or lease of District-owned land, or participating in the revenue bond program? Yes
		Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No <input type="checkbox"/>

6)		What 2-3 things would you do to close the large and growing achievement gaps in our public schools? What would you do to ensure that all students and their schools have a healthy physical environment, quality teachers, instructional supplies and other resources they need to be successful?
		Answer A
		As a member of the DC Council's Education Committee, I have toured every traditional public school in Ward 4 and seen first hand the needs of every school. A top priority is that every school is modernized and receives ample resources. I have created the Ward 4 Education Committee made up of community and education leaders to advise me on policy.

7)		The collective bargaining agreement covering DC teachers expired 3 years ago. The effect of this is to deny collective bargaining rights to those who democratically voted to join a union. What is the role of the City Council in ensuring that contract negotiations are not intentionally stalled by labor or by management? How would you ensure that the voice of workers is heard and encourage a broader, productive, and a more healthy labor/management relationship?
		I will work with the Office of Labor Relations and Collective Bargaining and the Deputy Mayor of Education to ensure that the collective bargaining negotiations continue and that all sides are working in good faith to not shall negotiations.

8A)		MetroAccess is a share-ride, door-to-door, paratransit service in the region for the most vulnerable transit passengers (the elderly and those with disabilities that can't take traditional transit). Do you support the allocation of additional funding to paratransit that will allow the companies to provide pay and benefits equivalent to their WMATA bus operator counterparts?
		Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No <input type="checkbox"/>

8B)		Additionally, would you support the crafting of legislation that would set standards that would ensure that paratransit operators are not required to accept money outside of their vans and set schedules that would ensure that riders do not have to be transported for hours before they are dropped off?
		Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No <input type="checkbox"/>

9)		In 2014, at least 170 Metrobus operators reported being assaulted and in 2015, there were even more incidents, including a station manager being stabbed and a bus operator who was caught in gun crossfire. Would you be willing to work with labor to craft legislation that would ensure the consistent enforcement of the law to protect transit operators who are assaulted on the job and protect them from excessive discipline when they are assaulted?

2016 DC Election Candidate Questionnaire

Congress extended the Abolishment Act (D.C. Code §§ 1-624.08 et seq.), effectively allowing the DC government to define the procedures governing any RIF initiated by an agency head, by limiting the procedures to which an aggrieved employee is entitled, and rendering those procedures nonnegotiable. Although this was a misguided effort to help DC government reduce costs, agency heads exploited this Act, often using it as a means to rid their agencies of unpopular employees. The use of such improperly targeted RIF's is an abuse of authority and does not serve the interests of the District. DC workers covered by a collective bargaining agreement have been unfairly deprived of any meaningful opportunity to assert the rights that they were intended to have under the District of Columbia Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act.

10)		Will you support legislation to repeal provisions of the Abolishment Act that override collective bargaining agreements?
		Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No <input type="checkbox"/>

11)		Should DC government be able to override collective bargaining agreement provisions regarding RIFs?
		Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No <input type="checkbox"/>

In October 2015, the DC City Council passed emergency legislation creating a pilot program to address the “crisis” in the management of Emergency Medical Services. The emergency legislation created a two-tiered strategy of EMS calls: Basic Firefighters/Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT) would respond to all EMS calls. Patients with low priority medical conditions would be required to wait for a private ambulance to transport them to a hospital. If a private ambulance does not arrive in 10 minutes, the patients would then be required to wait for a fully staffed EMS medic unit to arrive.

The EMS stakeholders consists of many unique and well-trained committed individuals who have a vested interest in the well-being of the District of Columbia residents who depend on emergency services. They are committed to delivering quality care, providing safe transport, and ensuring that DC residents receive continuous care before and during their transport to the appropriate facility.

12)		In your opinion, are important government services such as emergency medical transport better served by strengthening DC workers who provide those services or by privatization?
		<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Keep work in house
		<input type="checkbox"/> Privatize

23)		There are independent DC government agencies such as the Public Service Commission, The Office of the Tenant Advocate, Office of the People's Counsel, the Public Employee Relations Board, and University of the District of Columbia Board of Trustees, and others that must function without political interference. The Mayor appoints the heads of these independent agencies and members of these Boards with the confirmation of the City Council. Boards can be stymied and stopped if timely replacements of those whose terms expire are not made by the Mayor; leaving the board without a quorum means no work can be done by the commissions.
